ABOUT

The Administrative Conference of the United States is an agency of the United States government. The Conference's principal mission is to recommend improvements to administrative procedure and process to the President, federal agencies, Congress, and the federal judiciary. The Conference accomplishes this mission by conducting research, formulating recommendations, spreading agency best practices, promoting information exchange, and sponsoring events and publications.

ACUS recommendations are designed, in the words of the Administrative Conference Act, to (1) ensure that federal agencies' "regulatory activities... are carried out expeditiously in the public interest," (2) "promote more effective participation and efficiency in the rulemaking process," (3) "reduce unnecessary litigation in the regulatory process," (4) "improve the use of science" in that process, and (5) "improve the effectiveness of laws applicable" to that process (5 USC § 591).

Through its Office of the Chairman, ACUS also assists individual agencies to improve programs, publishes sourcebooks of enormous value to both the government and public, and provides nonpartisan advice to executive branch officials and members of Congress and their staffs. ACUS's work improves the efficiency and fairness of government processes.

The Administrative Conference is structured to facilitate collaboration among a wide array of federal agencies, engage administrative law and regulatory experts from the private sector and academia, and ensure representation of diverse viewpoints. This collaborative effort is designed to produce consensus-based, nonpartisan recommendations for improving federal administrative processes, which affect every sector of our national economy and the lives of American citizens.

Since its establishment in 1968, ACUS has adopted hundreds of recommendations, each of them based on careful study and the informed deliberations of its members in an open process that encourages public input. The Conference's research and recommendations cover both general administrative law topics that cut across many federal agencies and specific ways in which particular agencies can improve their procedures.

Officials in all three branches of government, as well as the public, routinely rely on the resources that ACUS provides to improve federal administrative procedure. Congress has enacted and the President, federal agencies, and the Judicial Conference have implemented many reforms based on ACUS recommendations. Policymakers regularly consult the many sourcebooks, reports, fact sheets, and other publications that ACUS produces; participate in interagency roundtables, public forums, and other events that ACUS organizes; and rely on nonpartisan advice and technical assistance that ACUS provides to agencies and Congress.

MISSION

The Administrative Conference of the United States brings together federal agencies and outside experts to make government work better by cooperatively studying mutual problems, exchanging information, and developing recommendations for action by the President, Congress, federal agencies, and the Judicial Conference of the United States to improve the fairness, adequacy, and efficiency of federal agency rulemaking, adjudication, licensing, and investigation.

EXTERNAL FACTORS

The agency's goals and measures assume full funding of the Conference's budget as submitted by the President to Congress. Less than full funding of the President's request may limit the agency's ability to produce the results and benefits set forth in this plan. Attainment of the Conference's strategic objectives may also be affected by the level of member participation and the extent of engagement by non-members and public stakeholders.

STRATEGIC PLAN LINK TO ANNUAL PERFORMANCE PLANS

The Conference will formulate performance measures for each of its strategic goals. The performance measures will be identified in the Conference's annual performance and accountability report. They will be used to determine the achievement of those strategic goals set forth in this plan.

CONSULTATION PLANNING PROCESS

In developing this plan, the Conference relied on a review of its prior strategic plan for FY 2016-2020 and its past performance and accountability report for FY 2022. The Conference also reviewed the strategic plans of other Federal agencies and sought input from ACUS staff during the drafting stage to ensure all personnel understand their role in fulfilling the agency's strategic goals.

The Conference will submit copies of this strategic plan to the Office of Management and Budget, its Congressional authorizing and appropriating committees, and its governing body, the ACUS Council. To ensure public accessibility, the Conference will also post the plan on its website: www.acus.gov.

PROGRAM EVALUATION

Over the next several years, the Conference will continue conducting evaluations to provide the agency with information to improve its operations, outcomes, and effectiveness at achieving mission-centric goals. The agency's evaluation schedule includes:

- Program evaluations required under GPRA in each annual Performance and Accountability Report (PAR).
- Evaluations of its work through surveys of the ACUS membership after plenary sessions and at periodic listening sessions.
- Evaluations of agency procedures governing budget and finance, procurement, human resources, and payroll as part of the annual administrative oversight audit.
- Evaluations of the security of IT systems and security management measures through regular IT audits.
